

Sephra helps provide a lifeline for people affected by cancer

Description

Sephra has boosted the coffers of a local cancer charity to the tune of Â£3,000.

The company donated the four-figure sum to Maggieâ€™s Cancer Centre in Kirkcaldy at a fundraiser held at The Duchess in the charityâ€™s honour.

Managing Director David Archer and wife Cathryn helped to raise a further Â£3,500 by performing as part of their long-running wedding band, Big Night Out.

Thanks to ticket sales donated by The Duchess and a raffle held on the night, the event has given Maggieâ€™s a total cash injection of Â£6,500.

Alas, Big Night Outâ€™s final set was bittersweet as it was the bandâ€™s last ever performance. Its members have since retired after 28 years playing local gigs and weddings.

The sell-out event marked the 10th annual fundraiser held by keen Maggieâ€™s supporters Alistair and Joanne Cameron.

Alistair has hailed the support for Maggieâ€™s as “incredible”. He was previously a founding member of the cancer charityâ€™s fundraising board.

Talking to the Fife Free Press, he said: “There are so many supporters of Maggieâ€™s that are always keen to have a night out.

“Huge thanks to everyone who purchased a ticket” and David and Cathryn from Sephra as well.

“Thank you also to everyone who came along. Â£6,500 isnâ€™t a small amount.

It was an amazing night; the atmosphere was great right from the very start. It was a real, feel-good atmosphere.

It was Big Night Out's last gig, so people were there to see them and support the event.

There were a lot of Maggie's supporters who come along every year regardless of who is playing.

The money raised by Sephra and friends will help support people with cancer and their families in Fife. It will help to ensure they can access free services such as information, events and talking therapy.
